The highlights of my visit to SAC Ayr.

My studies at SAC lasted from January 10th until the end of May 2010. The town of Ayr is a beautiful place on the coast in the West of Scotland. Scotland was totally foreign country to me before I got there. I was expecting a lot from my exchange student period. My aim was to widen my point of view in tourism business and improve my linguistic abilities. But most of all I expected to make new friends for lifetime.

During my journey I found out that the Scottish people are very friendly and warm. Campus life was quite lively and I met lots of unforgettable characters.

Even though campus nights were fun, in their school life students were hard working and tried hard and their best at their studies. I was really surprised the big effort that the teachers make to take the students to see places and meet different kind of firms.

SAC is an internationally respected teaching and research institution providing quality education. You're all that and so much more. For example imagine learning where there were about 10 students to one instructor. That means you get more attention in class. They have more time to help you learn.

Thank you all for making my short time of studying so memorable. I recommend your college to everyone who wants to take some international courses.
